

Goodwill Wants You to Dump Your Ex's Stuff

Anti-Valentine's Day Donation Drive kicks off Sunday, January 29

Las Vegas, NV - January 23, 2017 – Don't hate this Valentine's Day. Donate.

Sunday, January 29 through Tuesday, February 14, Goodwill of Southern Nevada will accept all that stuff an ex-boyfriend, girlfriend or spouse left behind after the break up at one of its more than 40 donation locations across the valley as part of the nonprofit's annual "Dump Your Ex's Stuff" donation drive.

Goodwill donation ambassadors will also accept items that may remind you of him or her. For example, the set of dishes you got as a wedding present. The cell phone you used to text each other all night long. Or the dress, tie or sweater you wore on that first date.

By turning ill-will towards an ex into Goodwill, donors can turn break ups into opportunities for local Nevadans. Goodwill's mission programs are funded through the sale of donated goods in retail stores, online and through recycling partners. Last year, Goodwill helped more than 12,500 individuals in our community with life changing job placement and training programs, including 3,000 people who Goodwill helped get jobs.

Remember, every time you donate to Goodwill you receive a donation receipt and a tax write off. So there's no excuse for you not to turn that animosity into generosity and feel the love for your community this Valentine's Day.

To find a Goodwill donation location near you please visit: www.Goodwill.Vegas

All items donated to Goodwill of Southern Nevada as part of the Dump Your Ex's Stuff donation drive must be the sole property of the donor. Goodwill of Southern Nevada and participating partners are not liable for items donated that do not belong to the individual donating.

@GoodwillVegas #AntiValentinesDay #DumpYourXsStuff #DontHateDonate

###

For more information or to set up interviews:

Kathy Topp, Red 7 Communications

kathy@red7communications.com

(702) 271-8305